His Glimpse of War

By R. W. KEENAN

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

In 1870, having been just graduated from college, I went abroad to see something of the world before settling to my life work. There was a great deal to see at that time—namely, one of the biggest wars of modern times. The Germans under Von Moltke were marching across the French border. Landing at Cherbourg, I went directly to Paris and, taking letters from the American minister, set out for the front to get a glimpse of war. Having been ten years too late in my birth to take part in our own great struggle in America, I was extremely desirous to witness a similar contest between the French and the Germans.

I was received kindly at the headquarters of Marshal MacMahon, but there were few great battles, and the two nations did not seem disposed to fight one for the benefit of a young American who had come across an ocean to see "the fun." So after remaining for a time with the French I determined to join the Germans. I realized that passing from one army to its opposing one during actual war was a serious business, but I had heard so much of the thrilling episodes of war from friends who had fought in the American contest that my young blood was fired to participate in a similar affair. So, selecting a point between the lines where the French had no outposts, I left them and, walking down a road, was taken in by a Prussian vedette.

This was rather a tame adventure, and I was on the lookout for something more exciting. Though I was not aware of it, something more exciting was on the lookout for me.

I presented my credentials, which were my passport and my letters to the French commanders. I had struck the troops under General Manteuffel, and it was at his headquarters that the documents were examined. I was treated with the utmost civility by the officers of his staff. Indeed, I could not but contrast the attention I received with that of the French officers, who upon the statement of the American minister, vouching for me, permitted me to go pretty much where I pleased, but paid little heed to me. The Prussians showered me with attentions, but I was not permitted to go about at all. Indeed, excuses were made to keep me at headquarters.

One evening General Manteuffel's chief of staff gave a dinner at which were several ladies. I was the guest of honor and was seated beside a very beautiful woman who spoke English with a broken accent. I was young and correspondingly susceptible; therefore it is not surprising that before the evening was spent I had fallen under a spell which, had I been older, I might have seen was purposely thrown over me. Before the party broke up I and this lady were left alone together. Suddenly her manner changed from lightness to intense seriousness.

"I am being watched," she said. "Watched?"

"Yes; they know my mission."

"What mission?"

"I saw you at MacMahon's headquarters. I was receiving my instructions while you were there. Save me!"

"How?"

"They know that MacMahon has sent some one into their lines for information. If you take the risk for a time I will go free. If suspected you can prove that you are an American and will not suffer. I cannot prove that I am not a Frenchwoman. Here is the information I bear. Take it. If they find it on me I die. Keep it for me till the danger is past, then give it to me."

She thrust a little roll of tissue paper upon me. At the moment she did so a Prussian officer entered, and I had no opportunity to hand it back without being seen. To do so would be equivalent to informing the officer that she was a spy.

But if found with the paper in my possession I would be shot. From that moment I was not for a second free from observation. When we were about to depart the chief of staff came to me and said:

"We move at 2 o'clock. The general will have no one except soldiers with us. We have kept you at headquarters for your own good. You have seen nothing; therefore you may go back whence you came."

Without waiting for a reply he conducted me to the picket line. Glad to go free with the lovely spy's pellet, I walked hastily away. I was followed and arrested. Taken back to General Manteuffel's headquarters, I was searched and the paper found on me.

As I was being led away I passed the lady who had given me the paper. The officers were apologizing to her for something, and I heard them tell her her carriage was waiting for her. I was kept under guard till morning, when an officer came hurrying toward me. As soon as he reached me he said angrily, "You are a fool!"

"I am at any rate not a spy."

"No; the real spy has gone. We learned that some one was among us and suspected two persons who came in at the same time—this woman and yourself. As soon as the woman had gone beyond our reach she sent us proof that she was in MacMahon's service and had duped you. You will depart for our rear at once."

I had had all of war I wanted and went.

For the past two weeks some animal, with a hoof-like track, six inches in diameter, had been destroying cabbages and other garden truck of Mark Roswell in Craftsbury and all attempts to follow the tracks had proved futile until at last the animal was traced to the remotest part of the Eden mountain, where the tracks were found to be those of the almost extinct Canadian moose caribou. Many farmers in the western part of the town have seen it. It has not yet been captured.
